but the researchers think this method could be a simple, inexpensive part of a toolkit to quickly identify and weed out bad drugs.